

Abstract

The method for determining the gastric emptying by orally administering a test substance and measuring its dwelling time in the stomach comprises determining the increase of  $^{13}\text{CO}_2$  in the exhaled respiratory air before and after the oral administration of free  $^{13}\text{C}$ -octanoic acid together with a standardized test meal.